The book 'Illustrated By Biographical Annals Of Asiatic Missions From Primitive To', published in 1844, is a comprehensive and detailed account of the history of Christian missions in Asia from the early centuries to the 19th century. Written by the American missionary and historian John Clark Marshman, the book offers a rich and vivid narrative of the lives and work of missionaries, explorers, and other individuals who played a significant role in the spread of Christianity in Asia.

Contents

The book is divided into three parts, with each part covering a different period in the history of Asiatic missions. Part I, entitled 'Primitive and Papal Missions', begins with the arrival of the Apostle Thomas in India in the first century and traces the development of Christianity in Asia under the influence of the Nestorian and Roman Catholic churches. Part II, 'The Protestant Reformation and Missions in India', examines the impact of the Protestant Reformation on missions in Asia and focuses on the work of missionaries from the Church of England, the London Missionary Society, and other Protestant denominations. Part III, 'Modern Missions in India and the East', covers the period from the late 18th century to the middle of the 19th century and explores the expansion of missionary activity in India, China, and other parts of East Asia.
