Early Life and Education

Rosina Acheampong was born on May 15, 1928, in the village of Kyebi, Ghana. Growing up in a humble farming family, she witnessed firsthand the challenges faced by her community in accessing healthcare.

Driven by a desire to make a difference, Rosina pursued education with determination. She completed her basic nursing training at the Korle Bu Teaching Hospital in Accra and later received a diploma in public health nursing from the University of London.

A Trailblazing Career in Nursing

Upon returning to Ghana, Rosina's nursing skills and compassion quickly became evident. She assumed various leadership roles in hospitals across the country, working tirelessly to improve patient care.

One of her most significant contributions was establishing the first coronary care unit in Ghana, demonstrating her commitment to the advancement of critical healthcare services.

Educating Future Nurses

Beyond direct patient care, Rosina recognized the importance of investing in the next generation of healthcare professionals. She dedicated much of her time to teaching and mentorship.

In 1964, she became the founding director of the School of Nursing at the Kwame Nkrumah University of Science and Technology (KNUST). Under her leadership, KNUST became a renowned center for nursing education, producing highly skilled and compassionate nurses.

Advocacy for Women's Health

Rosina's passion extended beyond nursing to the broader realm of women's health and empowerment. She strongly advocated for increased access to reproductive healthcare and education.

As a founding member of the Ghana Registered Nurses Association, she played a pivotal role in shaping policies that protected women's rights and improved their health outcomes.

Community Development and Legacy

Rosina's commitment to her community extended far beyond her work in healthcare. She established a foundation to provide scholarships to promising nursing students from disadvantaged backgrounds.

She also spearheaded community development projects, including the construction of hospitals, clinics, and schools in rural areas.

A Life of Impact

Rosina Acheampong's life was marked by unwavering dedication, exceptional achievements, and a profound impact on her community. Her contributions to nursing, education, and women's health advocacy left an enduring legacy.

She received numerous accolades, including the Order of the Volta, Ghana's highest civilian honor, for her outstanding service.

Inspiration for Generations

The life and work of Rosina Acheampong continue to inspire generations of Ghanaians and beyond. Her story is a testament to the power of perseverance, compassion, and the transformative impact of one individual's commitment to making a difference.

Through her legacy, Rosina Acheampong lives on as a beacon of hope, reminding us that even the most humble beginnings can lead to extraordinary achievements and lasting impact.
