The film follows the journey of a group of Inuit elders who travel from Greenland to Copenhagen to attend the United Nations Climate Change Conference. Along the way, they witness firsthand the devastating effects of climate change on their homeland and on the Arctic region as a whole.

The film is a powerful reminder of the urgency of climate change, and the need to take action to protect our planet.

The Impacts of Climate Change on Greenland

Greenland is one of the regions that is most affected by climate change. The average temperature in Greenland has increased by about 3 degrees Celsius over the past century, and the ice sheet is melting at an accelerating rate.

The melting ice sheet is causing sea levels to rise, which is threatening coastal communities around the world. It is also disrupting the food chain and making it more difficult for animals to survive in the Arctic.

The Inuit people of Greenland are particularly vulnerable to the effects of climate change. Their traditional way of life is based on hunting and fishing, and the melting ice is making it increasingly difficult to find food.

The Journey to Copenhagen

In 2009, a group of Inuit elders traveled from Greenland to Copenhagen to attend the United Nations Climate Change Conference. They wanted to share their experiences with the world and to call for action on climate change.

The elders' journey was a long and difficult one. They had to travel by boat, plane, and train to reach Copenhagen. Along the way, they encountered many skeptics who did not believe that climate change was real.

Despite the challenges, the elders persevered and they eventually reached Copenhagen. They delivered a powerful speech at the conference, and they called on world leaders to take action on climate change.

The Legacy of Our Iceberg Is Melting

Our Iceberg Is Melting is a powerful and moving documentary that has had a profound impact on people around the world. The film has helped to raise awareness about the devastating effects of climate change, and it has inspired people to take action.

The film is a reminder that we all have a role to play in protecting our planet. We need to reduce our carbon emissions, invest in renewable energy, and protect our forests.

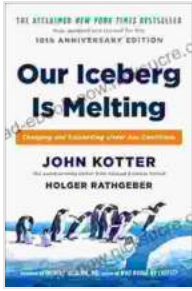

Our Iceberg Is Melting is a powerful call to action. Let's all work together to protect our planet for future generations.
