

Trail to the Interior: R.M. Patterson Collection

The Trail to the Interior: R.M. Patterson Collection is a significant collection of photographs, negatives, and lantern slides that document the history of the Canadian fur trade and the exploration of the Canadian interior. The collection includes over 8,000 images taken by R.M. Patterson between 1882 and 1913.

Patterson was a photographer and explorer who traveled extensively throughout the Canadian interior. He was commissioned by the Canadian government to document the fur trade and the exploration of the region. Patterson's images provide a unique glimpse into the lives of fur traders, voyageurs, and Native Americans, as well as the landscape and wildlife of the Canadian interior.
